Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com

Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com

Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com

Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com

Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com

Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com

Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com

Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com

Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com

Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com

Geocaching is a fun sport where you hunt for hidden treasure using a GPS (Global Positioning System) receiver. GPS users hide caches (containers with a log book and often small items to trade). The exact coordinates are published on the internet so other GPS users can go on a 'treasure hunt' to find them.

The rules are quite simple… when you find a geocache you should:
1. record your visit in the log book,
2. if you take something, leave something for someone else,
3. re-hide the container as you found it.

Geocaching is open to everyone with a sense of adventure!
To learn more - go to www.geocaching.com

American Cacher

Courtesy www.AmericanCacher.com